

Facts About Luke Bryan That You Didn't Know

Singer Luke Bryan spent his childhood on a farm in Leesburg, G, A. He was mostly engaged in outdoor activities such as fishing and hunting as a child while helping his dad with the family business. He got his first guitar. By the time he was 15, Luke had some mastery of the instrument and provided entertainment to small crowds.

Luke was discovered by two local songwriters when he was singing in a local club. They invited him to join them at a local church for writing sessions. Once he graduated high school, he set off to Nashville to pursue becoming a successful singer.

However, in a sad turn of events, Luke lost his brother in an auto accident and decided not to move. Soon after, he enrolled at Georgia Southern University and helped his dad with the family business. Like the supportive father he was, his dad threatened to fire Luke if he didn't move to Nashville to pursue his career. Once he moved, Luke was lucky to get a songwriting deal with Roger Murrah's company.

Early Career

In 2005, his work appeared on Travis Tritt's album. Once, while performing at a club, he was discovered by a representative of Capitol Records. He was immediately signed into a recording contract.

Personal Life

In December 2006, he married Caroline Boyer, a member. They had their first son, Thomas Boyer Bryan, two years later. In August 2011, they got their second son, named Christopher Bryan.

The American Idol Judge is still married to his wife Carolyn Boyer, and they have two kids together. They also have three adopted children. The couple met in college and dated on and off until Luke proposed, and they got married. Even though the two have had a relationship with its share of highs and lows, they seem to know how to bounce back and keep things together for a very successful union.

His Work

In 2007, Luke released a debut single named "All My Friends Say". He also wrote a song for Billy Currington that was number one on the Billboard U.S Hot Country Songs.

His debut song got to number five, and his album "I'll Stay Me" was released in 2007. He then released his third single, "Country Man", in February 2008. It became his second Top 10 hit.

Luke was able to get college fans after releasing EPs that coincided with the spring break. In 2009 October, he released his album "Doin' My Thing". After that, this catapulted him into becoming the Academy of Music's new top artist and solo vocalist of the year.

At the CMT Music Awards in 2010, his single "Do I" got the year's breakthrough video. His EP "Spring Break...Here to Pary" peaked at no. 1 on the Billboard's Country Album Charts and Billboard 200.

His song "Play it Again" got to No.1 on the Country Airplay charts and Hot Country Songs in May 2014.